Editorial Review

About the Author

Lisa Sun is a recent Harvard Business School graduate and currently works as a Senior Associate at a secondary private equity firm in New York City. After studying International Studies and Business in the Huntsman Program at the University of Pennsylvania, Lisa worked in investment banking at Goldman Sachs in New York and private equity at TPG in Hong Kong.

For her MBA summer internship, Lisa worked in management consulting at McKinsey And Company. Lisa's passion is to help others succeed in their professional life. She was the Co-Captain of the University of Pennsylvania's recruiting team at Goldman Sachs and the Co-Head of Career Representatives at Harvard Business School.

Lisa is an active career advisor on Evisors.com, and plans on pursuing her passion further by volunteering as a career coach for New York-based business undergraduate and graduate programs.

Lisa currently lives in New York City with her husband and is expecting a new baby in October. She is looking forward to tackling the challenge of being a working mom.

Dear Readers,

Whether you're a current student just starting to explore a career with Goldman Sachs, or a few years out of school but considering a full-time analyst position, this book is your "one-stop shop" for all the tips and techniques you'll need to get that job and internship offer.

I've reviewed thousands of resumes and selected dozens of students for interviews; I will show you exactly what to highlight from your academic and work experience to catch a reviewer's attention. Don't have finance or work experience? I will explain what other characteristics to bring out from your academic and extra-curricular experience and even include my resume bullet points for reference.

I've attended numerous on-campus and networking events as both a student and Goldman Sachs representative, so I can teach you actionable strategies and things to say that will create a lasting impression with your potential interviewers. Feel uncomfortable speaking in groups where other people are acting like sharks circling its prey? I will teach you what research to do in advance and how to act in order to gracefully enter and exit these conversations.

Read on and I look forward to welcoming you to the Goldman Sachs family!

Lisa
