Ezekiel's Oracles against Egypt: A Literary and Philological Study of Ezekiel 29-32 (Biblica et Orientalia) By Lawrence Boadt C.S.P.

The Book of Ezekiel is often characterized as verbose and prosaic in style, filled with secondary additions and glossaries, and more the product of a later school than of the prophet. By making use of modern studies in the Northwest Semitic languages, particularly in their commonly-held elements of rhetorical and poetic style, a clearer portrait of the individual style and method of the prophet Ezekiel will emerge. Indexed.
